Our client, the Health and Social Services (HSS) Department of the Yukon Government, located in spectacular Whitehorse, promotes, protects and enhances the well-being of Yukoners through the provision of a continuum of quality, accessible, and appropriate health and social services including health care, disease prevention, and treatment services to the population.

The Health and Social Services Department is seeking a Medical Officer of Health (MOH) to join the Population and Public Health, Evidence and Evaluation team to provide medical leadership in Population Health Promotion and Public Health Policy Development in the planning, development, implementation and evaluation of the public health programs designed to protect and enhance the health of the Yukon population.

Medical Officer of Health

The MOH will provide independent advice to the Minister of Health and Social Services, other Ministers and public officials on public health issues including the need for improvements or changes to existing public health related legislation, policies and practices. Working closely with the Assistant Deputy Minister of Innovation, Quality and Performance, the MOH will use a population health approach along with a “whole of government” lens to provide advice and recommendations on ways to improve the overall health and wellness of Yukoners, reduce health disparities, and narrow the gaps in health inequity.

The successful candidates will possess a degree in medicine along with the appropriate clinical and academic post graduate qualifications ideally including a Fellowship in Public Health and Preventative Medicine with the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada and/or equivalent qualifications in a public health related discipline, will be eligible for licensure with the Yukon Medical Council, and will be known for successful stakeholder engagement and a progressive leadership style.

These positions offer exceptional opportunities to make a difference by providing system wide public health leadership in a high profile role.
